To Whom It May Concern,

I have no problem with endorsing Kelvin Deal as a spokesman on how to approach Finances from a Christian perspective in the present worldly system.

Kelvin is by profession an accountant and his personal interest in both seeking to help those in financial need and trying to interpret the scriptural principles regarding finance as they should be applied, have produced some interesting discoveries.

Kelvin has worked these issues through and provides sound advice.
e.g. He recently gave our home meeting some instruction in which he pointed out the balance between being in financial bondage with a mortgage, which has the potential of release, versus the ongoing financial bondage of paying rent at an equivalent or higher rate and yet with no release potential especially if there is no realistic means of saving.

He also has some interesting insight regards the concept of the church being a "storehouse".

I am sure Kelvin will be of assistance in clarifying any financial issues your church or group should require.

Yours in Christ's Service,

(G.R. Turner)
